The Blue Geranium: Complete & Unabridged (The Agatha Christie Collection: Marple)

Synopsis

Sir Henry Clithering, ex-commissioner of Scotland Yard, is staying with his old friends near St Mary Mead. When Miss Marple comes to dinner, she proves that simply by observing human nature in the sleepy village, she is easily able to unravel the mysteries put forward by the other diners.

Customer Reviews

The only reason I give this 4 stars instead of 5 is the same exact reason I love Joan Hickson's voice: her voice and speech are so particular to her. Because she has such a quickly identifiable voice, I sometimes find it difficult to follow who is talking while she is reading. She sounds like Miss Marple the whole time and I haven't yet gotten used to "Miss Marple" reading other people's lines. But I've only listened to one of the stories so far: The Blue Geranium, so maybe I'll develop a better ear as I get farther along. I intend to listen to them all and I'm sure I'll enjoy them, but it isn't a book on tape that you can listen to while you're driving, or you'll end up in Toledo - it's good for listening while hand sewing or embroidering or something that doesn't require any thought (so you can focus wholly on that wonderful voice and the story.) I hope you enjoy! I am!

Wonderful!
